

~~SECRET~~

22 JUN 1977

The most frequent and deserved criticism of the intelligence product today is that it is particularly good in technical and hardware areas, but deficient in political analysis and forecasting. In my view, this is in part a reflection of the dominance of military influence over the intelligence system throughout the past 30 years. It argues the case for a more objective arbiter of the priority of intelligence effort.

E2 IMPDET
CL BY DCI~~SECRET~~